Did you know? Kenya will soon break ground on its first ultramodern... <http://www.designab.com/kenya/postcards/29/postcards-from-kenya-...>

- The 31-mile Thika Road, expected to be commissioned early next year, will be Kenya's first ultramodern superhighway, allowing for new business opportunities by reducing traffic and opening Nairobi up to increased investment. The highway is expected to make a positive impact on key sectors of the economy, including real estate, manufacturing, transport and the labor market.
- Thika Road will also help reduce congestion in Nairobi by allowing for the development of real estate outside of the city along the highway.
- The Kenyan government has invested more than Sh100 billion ($1.1 billion) in the construction and rehabilitation of key roads in the country, Permanent Secretary for Roads Michael Kamau recently said. In the past year, the government has repaired over 60 percent of Kenya's major roads.
